The Florida Trail

Florida's Footpath Forever

First blazed in 1966 and designated one of 11 National Scenic Trails in the United States in 1983, The Florida National Scenic Trail (FNST) meanders from Big Cypress National Preserve near Miami to Gulf Islands National Seashore near Pensacola. Providing more than 1,400 miles of hiking, it traverses Florida's vast array of unique ecosystems. The FNST is managed in partnership by the Florida Trail Association, a nonprofit volunteer organization which builds and maintains the trail, the USDA Forest Service, its federal administrator, and more than two dozen land managers whose land the trail crosses. The FNST is officially recognized as Florida's statewide trail and as the state's official non-motorized trail connecting its culture, heritage and communities.

With more than 1,800 miles of hiking opportunities, the entire Florida Trail System includes the FNST and numerous linear and loop hiking trails located throughout the state in Florida State Parks, state forests, county preserves and other public lands.

Follow the Orange Blazes...

A soft morning fog stretches across the horizon of pine flatwoods as you arise from your tent, ready for today's hike. You hear the haunting call of a barred owl, inhale the fragrant aroma of damp pine needles. Sitting to stir a cup of coffee, you see a fox squirrel scamper up a sand live oak. It's another perfect day on the Florida Trail.

The Florida Trail needs your help. With a goal of protecting the 1,400 mile footpath, volunteers and state and federal agencies are working to fill the gaps and maintain more than 1,000 miles of trail, its gaps connected by roadwalks. The future of the Florida Trail depends on the continuing support and contributions from FTA members. Your membership is an important step towards its completion.

The Florida National Scenic Trail provides a window into Florida's long history, from the Timucua of 3,000 years ago to the waves of European settlers to the state – Spanish and French explorers in the 1500s, British in the 1700s. Varied landscapes and interesting trails towns are part of the appeal. Take a dip in the crystal-clear trailside spring, or stop at a 1890s general store for ice cream. Walk along the undulating bluffs of the Suwannee River or wander through plantations reclaimed by pine flatwoods. Watch sugar cane harvests along the edge of the Everglades, and tangle with the swampy Bradwell Bay Wilderness, a haven of botanical wonders.

Development of the Florida Trail began with volunteers of the Florida Trail Association in 1966. Today, bordered by rivers and lakes, and surrounded by forests of palms, pine, cypress, and moss-draped live oaks, the trail offers a unique hiking experience. Utilizing public lands where possible and developed under agreements with private landowners elsewhere, the Trail threads its way through the state. The winter and spring months, when the air is crisp and the dry season is upon the land, are best for hiking in Florida. Expect to see abundant wildlife as you hike the quiet wilderness areas of Florida.

In South Florida, just an hour's drive west of Miami, the Florida Trail starts its northern journey in the Big Cypress National Preserve, a semi-tropical ecosystem featuring cypress trees draped with orchids and bromeliads. Central Florida terrain has rolling pinelands, palm hammocks, and lakes. North Florida is known for its rivers, deep woods, unsurpassed scenery and solitude.

OUR MISSION

The Florida Trail Association develops, maintains, protects and promotes a network of hiking trails throughout the state, including the unique Florida National Scenic Trail. Together with our partners we provide opportunities for the public to hike, engage in outdoor recreation, participate in environmental education and contribute to meaningful volunteer work.
